Kerala Veterinary & Animal Sciences University

POOKOT VETERINARY COLLEGE INAUGURATED

REEJA GEORGE P.

Assistant Professor, Dept. of Extension, CoVAS, Pookot.

At the gateway to Wayanad, amongst the hills of Lakkidi, stands a new landmark – a testimony of the efforts of the Veterinary fraternity. As one traverses the national highway from Kozhikode to Mysore just two kilometers before Vythiri town lies the College of Veterinary and Animal Sciences, Pookot, nestled amongst some of the highest hills of Wayanad, and surrounded by nature in all her grandeur. The college is located amidst the misty cerulean clad hills and with a view that transcends all human imagination.

Wayanad district, literally the land of paddy fields (Vayal nadu)_ is the spice scented dairy district of Kerala located 76 kilometers from the shores of Kozhikode.

The College of Veterinary and Animal Sciences, Pookot had its modest beginnings when the Government of Kerala earmarked 100 acres of land in the erstwhile Pookot Dairy Project in Kunnathuedavaka village of Vythiri taluk way back in August 1998. The college began functioning at Mannuthy with the late Dr K.M. Ramachandran at the helm. Subsequent to the unfortunate demise of Dr K M Ramachandran, Dr S Sulochana took charge. Dr P P Balakrishnan was assigned the post of Special officer from 10.10.2000 and is now the Associate Dean of the College. Students were admitted to the B.V.Sc and A.H. course from 1999 and classes were held at Mannuthy.

Dr P.P. Balakrishnan, took charge of COVAS Pookot as Special Officer in October 2000. His unstinted efforts at the helm of affairs saw the transformation of this institution from a single room facility in Mannuthy to a full fledge institution of national standing. With the inauguration of the college, he has been re-designated as Associate Dean. The college is striving forward into the realms of perfection under his leadership.

The Hon Chief Minister of Kerala Sri Oomen Chandy on 11.12.2004 formally inaugurated the new buildings at Pookot. Subsequent to this nineteen assistant professors were appointed. Students of second and third year B.V. Sc were shifted from Mannuthy to Pookot. Today the college had 13 fully functional departments imparting undergraduate veterinary education to four batches of students. The first batch of students passed out in August 2005. The undergraduate laboratories have been fully equipped to VCI standards and the library with around 2500 titles is fully functional. The clinical complex is nearing completion. The instructional farm attached to the college is located 2 kilometers away from the academic block at Sugandhagiri. Students of the college are housed in the Ladies hostel and men's hostel.
